ANNEX II – Contribution system

Introduction

With a broad membership spread out across Europe, the situation of each EFA member party is unique. Quantifying these differences into a fair set of rules for annual contributions has been challenging, and is an issue not only for EFA, but for all European Union Political Parties (EUPPs).

The General Assembly of EFA, in its meeting on 27 May 2021 reviewed the existing contribution system and proposed an updated scale with fairer and more objective criteria for the calculation of contributions.

Grounds for revision of the former contribution system

The former calculation system was based on two cumulative factors: A) Level of representation and B) whether the party is in Government or not. At the same time, there were three categories for parties in government.

It posed several challenges, inter alia:

- No distinction between full members and candidate or associate members.
- Ambiguity on 'In Government' factor: in regional, local or state Governments or Parliaments?
- Lack of consistency on territory ranking (territories are graded from 1 to 3, based on perceived wealth of territory, but this is subjective)
- Does not account for multiple elected representatives (e.g. a party with one elected representative in a state parliament pays the same as a party with 20 elected members in the same parliament).

Approved system

To have more objective and comprehensive system, the following criterion are proposed:

- Takes the representation level separately and in a cumulative way, rather than taking the highest level.
- Introduces a weighting factor based on an economic parameter (e.g.: GDP per inhabitant or median income per territory).
- Accounts for multiple elected representatives.
- And more broadly, explores objective parameters that allow a fairer calculation.

To calculate the contribution per party, the following steps of calculation are to be applied:

1. Gather the number of Members of the Regional Parliament, Members of the State Parliament, and Members of the European Parliament of the Party in question.
2. Apply the following formula.

$$\begin{aligned} & \textit{Total amount before GDP correction and rounding} = \\ & 2000 - 1250 \cdot x_1 + (150 \cdot x_2 - 50 \cdot y_1) + (150 \cdot x_3 + 125 \cdot y_2) + (2300 \cdot x_4 + 750 \cdot y_3) + 4325 \cdot x_5, \end{aligned}$$ where

- x_1, x_2, x_3, x_4 and x_5 are Boolean or logic values that take value 1 for TRUE and value 0 for FALSE.
 - x_1 refers to being represented at the local level, which 1 being local and 0 being above the local level of representation.
 - x_2 refers to being represented at the regional level, which 1 being regional and 0 being below or above the regional level of representation.
 - y_1 equals the total number of MRPs.
 - x_3 refers to being represented at the State level, which 1 being State and 0 being below or above the State level of representation.
 - y_2 equals the total number of MSPs.
 - x_4 refers to being represented at the EU level, which 1 being European and 0 being below the European level of representation.
 - y_3 equals the total number of MEPs.
 - x_5 refers to being in government at least at the regional level, which 1 being in government and 0 being not in government.
3. Retrieving Region's GDP Index based on party. To do that, the reference used is the Index based on GDP in Purchasing Power Standards (PPS) in relation to the EU-28 average, by NUTS 2 regions. Source: Eurostat.
4. Adjust the Total amount before GDP correction and rounding previously calculated in the following way:
- If the party's region GDP in PPS in relation to the EU-28 average is <90 (poor regions), the amount previously calculated is decreased by 5%, so that:
$$\textit{Total amount before rounding} = \textit{Total amount before GDP correction and rounding} \cdot 0.95$$
 - If the party's region GDP in PPS in relation to the EU-28 average is between 90-125 (average regions), no adjustment is to be made, so that:

$$\textit{Total amount before rounding} = \textit{Total amount before GDP correction and rounding}$$

If the party's region GDP in PPS in relation to the EU-28 average is >125 (rich regions), the amount previously calculated is increased by 5%, so that:

$$\textit{Total amount before rounding} = \textit{Total amount before GDP correction and rounding} \cdot 1.05$$

5. Round it to the nearest multiple of 25.

23. All written material shall be distributed among those who file the petition and the members of the Conciliation Committee.

24. The Secretary General receives a copy of the petition, an update of relevant information during the mediation or conciliation process and a full report afterwards.

29. Employees shall not contribute directly or indirectly to the costs of the proceedings.
30. The EFA Secretariat provides administrative and organisational support to the Conciliation Committee.
31. Petitions can be submitted also via email to an address determined by the Conciliation Committee
32. The Conciliation Committee can appoint one or more of its members with the task to examine the petition submitted and within eight (8) days shall decide upon its eligibility and answer to the submitter.
33. The response shall include:
 - 33.1. the acknowledgement of receipt of the petition;
 - 33.2. a proposal to conduct a mediation if applicable;
 - 33.3. a timeframe for the deliberations process in cases where the petition is eligible, or justification for refusal of the petition in cases where the request has been considered ineligible.
34. If a submission is rejected, the submitter has thirty (30) days to reintroduce the petition to the whole Conciliation Committee, which then has to take a decision on the eligibility within thirty (30) days.

ANNEX IV – EFA anti-harassment policy

The European Free Alliance has progressively incorporated gender equality criteria since 2019 (see the 2019 European Parliament elections Manifesto). The Flensburg Declaration on Women’s Participation in Politics was approved in 2020 by the EFA General Assembly, and the EFA Women’s Forum was launched in 2020 as a result. An Equality Diagnosis to study the mainstreaming of gender policies in the European Free Alliance was commissioned from the specialised consultancies “Andaira” and “Pandora Mirabilia” in 2021. Following their analysis and conclusions, the Women’s Forum proposed to incorporate changes to the statutes and to create an anti-harassment policy.

EFA aims to provide a safe environment for all in our party, free from discrimination and any inappropriate behaviour, including but not limited to sexual harassment. For this reason, we are creating this new tool: an internal policy for prevention, action and resolution of sexual harassment and gender discrimination situations. With this tool we will be able to fight decisively against these types of harassment. We are committed to having zero tolerance for harassment and clearly and unequivocally disapprove of such behaviors and attitudes in our organisation.

This protocol addresses two fundamental strategic dimensions: prevention and action in situations of harassment. Therefore, it brings together actions to prevent, detect, and resolve situations of sexual harassment that may occur within the EFA environment. It is a commitment to the total eradication of these types of conducts and to guarantee the right of all people to receive respectful, dignified, and equal treatment in a safe and productive work environment.

Legal basis

This protocol is based on the following legal documents:

- The Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW, 1979), which establishes the principle of non-discrimination and proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights, regardless of any distinction, including on grounds of sex, and which urges signatories to protect to all rights and freedoms it proclaims, with particular emphasis, in Articles 10 and 11, on equal rights between women and men in education and employment.
- The Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women by the General Assembly of the United Nations, resolution 48/104/1993, which in Articles 1 and 2 defines what actions constitute acts of violence against women and the frameworks within which this violence is committed.
- The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union (Nice, 2000), which in Article 21 prohibits any form of discrimination, in particular on the grounds of sex, race, ethnic or social origin, disability, age, or sexual orientation, among others, and which also defines the right to education and employment in Articles 14 and 15.
- The Directive 2002/73/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 September 2002 amending Council Directive 76/207/EEC, on the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women regarding access to employment, vocational training and promotion, and working conditions, Article 2 of which defines and prohibits harassment.

- The Directive 2006/54/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 July 2006 on the implementation of the principle of equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women, which, regarding employment and occupation, proclaims that situations of harassment and sexual harassment constitute a form of discrimination and shall therefore be prohibited and be subject to effective, proportionate and dissuasive penalties.
- The Directive 2006/54/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 July 2006 on the implementation of the principle of equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women in matters of employment and occupation sets out the definitions of direct discrimination, indirect discrimination, harassment on grounds of sex and sexual harassment, as well as the possible sanctions for each case.
- The European Commission Recommendation on the protection of the dignity of women and men at work of 27 November 1991 is the European standard to develop preventive measures regarding this EU Directive.
- The European Parliament resolution of 11 September 2018 on measures to prevent and combat mobbing and sexual harassment at the workplace, in public spaces, and political life in the EU (2018/2055(INI)).
- Articles 2 and 3 of the Treaty on European Union (TEU) and Articles 8, 10, 19 and 157 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU).
- The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, which entered into force with the adoption of the Treaty of Lisbon in December 2009, and, in particular, Articles 1, 20, 21, 23 and 31 thereof.
- The Directive 2006/54/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 July 2006 on the implementation of the principle of equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women in matters of employment and occupation.
- The EIGE publication of June 2017 entitled ‘Cyber violence against women and girls’.
- The United Nations legal instruments in the field of human rights, notably those of women’s rights, such as the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenants on Civil and Political Rights and on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and its Protocol, and the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.
- Other UN instruments on sexual harassment and violence against women, such as the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action of 25 June 1993 adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights, the Declaration by the United Nations General Assembly on the Elimination of Violence against Women of 20 December 1993, the Resolution on crime prevention and criminal justice measures to eliminate violence against women of 21 July 1997, the reports by the UN Special Rapporteurs on violence against women, and General Recommendation No 19 of the CEDAW committee.
- The Istanbul Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence, in particular Articles 2 and 40 thereof.

- The Regulation (EU) 2016/679 from the European Parliament and Council of 27 April 2016 relating to the protection of physical persons regarding the processing of personal data and the free circulation of this data.

Goals

The general objective of this protocol is to define the framework for action in relation to cases of sexual harassment or gender discrimination, with the explicit aim of eradicating these types of conduct in the working environment of the European Free Alliance. The protocol aims to be a comprehensive tool for the prevention, response, and resolution of these situations. Therefore, its specific objectives are:

- To develop the design and implementation of awareness-raising strategies.
- To get the necessary information to diagnose the extent that this issue is present in the organisation
- To guarantee and improve the coordination channels within EFA and develop integrated action.
- To provide diversified resources for a fast resolution of every type of harassment.
- To create fast, efficient, and effective intervention circuits.
- To define the roles and responsibilities of all the involved actors.
- To guarantee the security, integrity, confidentiality, and dignity of the involved people.

The application of this protocol shall not discard the activation, from the involved people's side, of the corresponding legal actions.

Scope

Subjective scope

This protocol applies to the following people:

- Representatives of EFA: members of the governing and representative organs of EFA and any other person who holds executive, commanding, surveillance, and control responsibilities, when they act in exercise of the party's activities.
- Member parties' delegates: Any person acting in the name of a member party when executing activities involving EFA.
- Staff: Any person developing a professional activity for the party, both through a labour or mercantile relationship.
- Public representatives: Any person linked to EFA who, by election or designation, holds a responsibility in the public administration.

Objective scope

This protocol is applicable to all the sexual harassment or gender discrimination situations which may occur in the scope of any EFA activities. It is for this reason that the typified behaviours have to be defined. The following descriptions have a generic scope and do not exclude other actions or behaviours which are not specifically included.

Sexual harassment

Any verbal, non-verbal or physical sexual behaviour performed with the purpose or effect of violating the dignity of a person or to create an intimidating, hostile, humiliating, offensive or bothering environment.

This behaviour can be performed in any scope of relations between people, independently of the gender of the harassing person or the harassed person. It is behaviour that is unwanted by the person who receives it, and is of a sexual nature or involves sexual connotations. This behaviour can be performed on a single occasion, or systematically and recurrently.

Without excluding or delimitating other behaviours, the following actions serve as examples:

- Physical violence
- Lascivious or obscene comments
- Inappropriate proposals to be alone
- Offensive sexual comments and jokes
- Persistent invitations to participate in unwanted leisure activities
- Comments on one's own sexual fantasies and capacities
- Requests for sexual favours
- Intentional and unsolicited physical contact or approximation
- Use of images of an explicit or offensive sexual character
- Sending offensive notes or messages with sexual content
- Diffusion of rumours, questions or explanations about the sexual life and preferences of another person.

Gender discrimination

Any behaviour performed on the basis of the other person's gender, sexual orientation or gender identity with the purpose of violating their dignity or to create an intimidatory, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.

This behaviour can be performed in any scope of relations between people, independently of the gender of the harassing person and the harassed person. It is behaviour that is unwanted by the person who receives it. This behaviour requires repetition and accumulation of offensive actions and is, therefore, continuous and systematic.

Without excluding or delimitating other behaviours, the following actions serve as examples:

- Sexist jokes or insults, or against sexual diversity

- Isolation: ignoring ideas, comments or actions based on gender grounds
- Mugging and underestimating a person's capacities, abilities or potential based on their gender or sexual orientation
- Discriminatory or derogatory comments
- Paternalistic attitudes
- Discriminatory behaviour based on gender or sexual orientation
- Addressing the other person with offensive manners

Prevention

The EFA Bureau and EFA Women's Forum will promote preventive actions. To achieve this, raising the awareness of all the actors involved in the organisation is necessary. Therefore, different awareness-raising strategies are proposed:

- Training for EFA staff and EFA parties
- Dissemination of information through our internal communication channels
- Mentoring programme for young women

Mentoring programme for young women

Mentoring is a key factor in addressing gender discrimination. EFA can facilitate the exchange of good practice in empowering women through its network of parties.

A mentoring and coaching programme could contain the following elements:

1. Provision of advice from women MEPs on how the European Parliament works and how to be as effective as possible as a member. Practical knowledge is often taken for granted, but in practice this advice can be very valuable to those considering becoming candidates or those newly elected. Parties should be encouraged to adopt this practice at all levels.
2. Role models are important. EFA should publish a book of women leaders and prominent women who are willing to play a mentoring role for other women.
3. Building confidence can be helped by organising women-only spaces to prepare for major EFA events, for example, a General Assembly for women could be held before the GA with a similar agenda to rehearse interventions in discussions etc.
4. Training has also been highlighted. EFA could play a very specific role in training trainers. Member parties could be offered training for individuals who would then offer that training to others within their own parties, thus ensuring knowledge is spread.
5. Considering how to be effective in politics generally could form an element of the training. What is considered effective is often based on how many male politicians work and many women feel unable to take on that role. There are different ways of measuring effectiveness, and they should have equal value.

Procedure

This protocol sets a specific procedure to treat different sexual harassment and gender discrimination situations. It is an internal procedure within EFA, which does not exclude external procedures, both administrative and legal.

The time limit to solve a sexual harassment or gender discrimination situation report is three (3) months from the moment when a person from the Conciliation Committee receives official notice.

Principles and guarantees

The procedure is based on the following principles:

- The principle of respect for personal dignity. The actions will take place with maximum respect for all the involved people.
- Non-discrimination based on race, religion, language, birthplace, gender or any other personal or social condition or circumstance.
- The principle of confidentiality. The details about the incident will be confidential and will only be known by those directly intervening in the development of the different phases of the procedure.
- The principle of speed and diligence. The investigation and resolution of the procedure must be developed with the required professionalism and diligence, avoiding unjustified delays, to be completed in the minimum time and respecting guarantees.
- The right to information. All the involved people have the right to receive information about the procedure, their rights and duties, and the progress towards a resolution.
- The principle of proportionality. The correction measures will be defined in relation to the seriousness of the facts and will be established proportionally.
- Accompaniment and protection. Support for the harassed person will always be a priority and will be ensured with all guarantees from the beginning of the procedure, asking for expert help if necessary. The Conciliation Committee will also intervene with the person who committed the aggression. They should actively work towards the reparation of the damage and the non-repetition of the actions through training and awareness-raising, if possible.

Phases of the procedure

The procedure for handling cases of sexual harassment and gender discrimination is divided into four phases:

- Communication and advice
- Internal report
- Investigation
- Resolution

During the whole procedure, the responsible person will take care of the custody of the required documentation and guarantee the necessary confidentiality.

1. Communication and advice

This phase of the procedure begins with the communication of a perception or suspicion of harassment which launches the communication and advice actions. None of the persons involved can receive any reprisal for participating in a communication or report process.

The goal of this phase is to inform, advise and accompany the harassed person and prepare the report phase, if necessary.

Who has to communicate harassment?

- The affected person, who is any victim of harassment or discrimination in the party's scope.
- Any person who detects a harassing behaviour (directed towards another individual) in the party's scope.

How and where is the communication directed?

It is necessary that communication is formulated as soon as possible after the situation happens. It must be directed to the Conciliation Committee by e-mail or telephone. The Conciliation Committee will inform the affected person about their rights, the actions that can be undertaken, and the procedure that will be followed once the report is presented.

Once the communication is sent, there are three possible scenarios:

- 1) If the assaulted person officially reports the case, the communication and advice phase will be closed and the internal report phase will be launched.
- 2) If the harassed person does not report the case, but the reference person considers that a harassment or discrimination situation may exist, they can present an internal report.
- 3) If both the harassed person and the reference person, after receiving all the information, consider that there are not signs of a harassment or discrimination situation, the phase will be closed through a motivation text.

The reference person is the one who takes care of the custody of the documentation and, if the procedure enters the following phase, will transfer it to the person responsible for the investigation.

2. Internal report

The internal report can be presented by both the assaulted and the reference person. It cannot be anonymous. The report has to be sent officially in written form to all the members of the Conciliation Committee.

The report has to explain the facts, as well as the people involved in this behaviour.

3. Investigation

The investigation phase begins once the official report is received by the Conciliation Committee. The goal of this phase is to deeply investigate the facts to develop a final report with the conclusions and analysis of the investigation.

Once the report is received, the Conciliation Committee has to develop a working plan.

The Conciliation Committee can ask for the necessary declarations and proves for the clarification of the facts, always considering the rights and duties of the people who declare: witnesses, the investigated or harassed person. The investigation must respect the principles of speed, confidentiality and participation of the involved people, as well as the other principles mentioned above.

A written proof of all the actions developed during the investigation is required.

If clear signs of a harassment situation are found, the Conciliation Committee can propose precautionary measures to the Bureau until the end of the procedure.

Once the investigation ends, the Conciliation Committee develops a final report with the analysis and conclusions.

4. Resolution

In this phase, the necessary action measures are taken depending on the evidence, recommendations and proposals submitted in the Conciliation Committee report. There are different types of resolutions:

- If there is evidence of the existence of a sexual harassment or gender discrimination situation, the Conciliation Committee will request the Bureau to begin a disciplinary action.
- If there is no evidence of the existence of a sexual harassment or a gender discrimination situation, the report will be achieved.

The conclusion report and a proposal for resolution will be transferred to the Bureau and the other people which need to know the result of the investigation.

The Conciliation Committee will manage, systematically and under strict confidentiality, an archive where investigations, evidence, declarations and all the documentation is kept.

Types of aggression

Sexist violence adopts different expressions and manners. It can appear with varying intensity. Direct violence is easily recognisable, but other expressions also exist, which normally appear together. It is important to take into account that every case is different. Therefore, to develop an adequate categorisation of the actions it is necessary not only to differentiate between types of aggression, but also all the elements that contribute to the context.

Type 1

These are behaviours or attitudes that take place in daily life, normally in a continuous and invisible way. They are more or less naturalised and, for this reason, they are usually denied or minimised. They produce different impacts on women, both as individuals and as a collective, making spaces of participation less equal, comfortable, insecure and, in the end, not free.

They can be, for example, attitudes or behaviours that are typically verbal, like disavowing, underestimating, mansplaining (the explanation of something by a man, typically to a woman, in a condescending or patronizing manner), adopting a paternalist attitude, monopolising the speaking time, not respecting others' opinions, making sexist comments (about sexuality, gender identity, roles, stereotypes, physical appearance, gender relationships, gender violence itself, etc).

Type 2

These are behaviours and attitudes that impact people's self-esteem, their physical and mental health, their capacity to socialise, be autonomous, move freely, etc. They can be both public and private and some of them can be minimised and naturalised.

They can be, for example, attitudes or behaviours such as insulting, screaming, isolating, controlling, humiliating, etc.

Type 3

These are behaviours that violate people's integrity, security and freedom, with important physical and psychological effects that prevent them from having a complete and free life, and that can have long-term consequences.

They can be, for example: sexual harassment (including online), discrimination based on sex, gender, gender identity or sexual orientation, physical or psychological aggression (including sexual aggression), dissemination of personal images, workplace harassment, etc.

Type 4

These are sexist aggression with a strong degree of violence, with deep consequences to the victim, their environment and community, and with sometimes permanent and irreversible consequences.

They can be, for example, rape, physical or psychological aggression, sexual abuse or aggression against underaged people, sexist murder, etc.

Measures to be implemented

Reparation and training measures

Provided that the person who committed the aggression is open to participate, reparation and training measures can be proposed depending on the type of the aggression and the contextual analysis:

- Training on gender equality (about its origins, causes, consequences, expressions and deconstruction of masculinity): For aggressions of type 1 and 2. They can be once at a given time or a more intense process depending on the context and the aggression.
- Therapeutic processes on gender equality: For aggressions of type 3. An individual therapeutic process will be required.

Once the process is at the end, the Conciliation Committee should develop a report about the measures' impact.

If the person who Committed the aggression does not cooperate, the Conciliation Committee can propose that the Bureau implement suspension or expulsion measures, depending on the context and the aggression.

Suspension and expulsion measures

If the aggression is of the type 4, the Conciliation Committee should purpose the Bureau the expulsion of that person, who will not be able to engage in EFA activities as a delegate or carry out any representative or technical functions in the party. This decision shall be adopted by absolute majority. The Bureau will inform the affected person about this decision.

In the case of type 3 aggressions – and type 2 if the person does not cooperate – the Conciliation Committee should propose that the Bureau temporarily suspends the person who committed the aggression and propose to simultaneously engage in the therapeutic processes described above. The suspension can last for one year. After this period, the Conciliation Committee and the Bureau will evaluate the case again and decide whether to continue with the suspension and the therapeutic process or put an end to the suspension measure.

Tracking, revision and publicity

1. Application tracking

The tracking of the application of this protocol is assigned to the Conciliation Committee. Its role is to analyse and evaluate the protocol.

The Conciliation Committee is composed of three (3) members elected for a period of three (3) years, as stated in articles 61-67 of the EFA Statutes.

This Committee will meet once a year to develop a report for the evaluation and tracking of the application of the protocol, which will be sent to the Bureau.

2. Revision

This protocol can be revised and modified whenever the organisation finds it necessary for a legal mandate.

The EFA Women's Forum can propose improvements to this protocol.

3. Publicity

EFA will ensure compliance with this protocol by publishing and spreading it to all the levels of the organisation.

4. Interpretation

Any dispute about the interpretation and application of this protocol has to be addressed to the Conciliation Committee.

5. Approval and entry into force

This protocol has to be approved by the Bureau and ratified by the General Assembly. The protocol will enter into force once approved by the General Assembly.
